The Harvest Festival.

The date is not yet settled—pending the reply of invited preachers. The Festival will probably be held on Sept. 25th, 1921.

The Flower Service.

The Matron of the Coventry Hospital desires us to acknowledge with very many thanks the receipt of the splendid gifts of Groceries and Flowers from the Teachers and Scholars of Keresley and Coundon Sunday Schools. She would like them to know how much their kindness is appreciated in remembering the Hospital.

The Women's Institute.

The Summer Meeting was held at Coundon Court on July 28th. Mrs. Miller gave a summary of the balance sheet in connection with the Institute building. The cost has been about £1,810, including £300 for electric light; towards this, £1,545 has been received, this includes £437 lent by members. Capt. Miller is giving the Cinema apparatus to the Women's Institute. One baby's bank book was given to Mrs. L. Enser.

KERESLEY WAR MEMORIAL.

A very impressive ceremony took place in the churchyard at Keresley on Sunday afternoon, August 7th, when Lieut.-General Sir John Keir, K.C.B., unveiled the memorial to those men of Keresley and Coundon who fell in the war.

The memorial is a cross of Cornish granite, simple, but imposing, which has been set up on the grass plot between the two churchyard gates. On the front is inscribed: "To the glory of God, and in memory of the men of this parish who fell in the Great War, 1914-1919"; and on the back, "These died in war that we at peace might live. These gave their best, so we our best should give. Not for themselves—for Justice, Freedom, Right. They fought, and bid us forward to the fight."

The names of the 22 fallen inscribed on the two sides are: A. Baseley, F. Boiles, G. G. E. Cash, E. W. Flowers, C. J. Hopkins, O. R. O. Jagger, J. Kenning, R. J. Liggins, C. Lyons, G. Manners, A. E. Mascord, J. Mitchell, L. Morris, D. Osborne, E. H. Oughton, D. Rotherham, J. E. Ryan, M. Sanders, G. L. Spraggitt, D. Terhegge, C. Ward, R. R. Waters. The names are cut in the stone and leaded.

The ceremony commenced with a procession from the school to the Church, in the following order: The Coventry Salvation Army Band, The Banner of the Coventry Branch of the ex-Service men, a large detachment of Keresley ex-Service men, the Vicar, the Rev. Walsingham C. Kerr, C.F., members of the V.A.D., the Girl Guides and Brownies, the Boy Scouts, and the children of the fallen.

Though rain fell during the afternoon there was quite a large gathering present.

The dedication was performed by the Vicar, the Rev. Walsingham C. Kerr, C.F., assisted by the Rev. O. G. O. Larr, the Rev. P. W. Low, and Mr. G. Jackson.

The service opened with the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," following which Captain Miller introduced Sir John Keir. They had met, he said, to unveil a memorial to their neighbours, friends, and relatives, who lost their lives in the great war. They were glad to know the memorial chosen had met with the approbation of all who had subscribed, and they were glad to have been allowed to place it in the churchyard in a suitable and convenient spot. The committee had concluded its duties, and he now had to ask the Church officers to accept the custody of the Cross and to look upon it as one of their most cherished possessions. The memorial had been subscribed for by almost every family in Keresley and Coundon.

Lieut.-General Sir John Keir thanked the committee for asking him to unveil the memorial, and said they could not honour a soldier more than by asking him to take part in a ceremony in memory of his fallen comrades. They owed all honour to the fallen men who gave their lives at a time when the country had need of them. They bore their full share in the greatest victory of all time, the victory of right over might. They had to remind their children and future generations what the war meant to the whole world, and to think of the spirit which animated those men, and enabled them to come through those four terrible years. He hoped that spirit would remain in their race. On an occasion of this sort it was well to remind them of the day when it was the youngest, bravest, and strongest of the race who were taken—taken in the flower of youth. They had given of their best. They must remember what they owed to the relatives of the fallen. He did not suppose there was a single family in Great Britain not brought into contact with suffering during the war. He did not think any nation had greater reason to be proud of itself than theirs. The Cross represented self-sacrifice, and there was on it the bronze sword representing duty and devotion. These memorials had sprung up all over the country, and were the greatest tribute to the greatest effort ever made by a determined nation. Every parish felt the same need and every parish suffered in the same great cause. They should not only think of the men who lost their lives with sorrow, but as men who added to the security of their country, and of the world at large.

Sir John Keir then unveiled the memorial.

After a brief pause, the Secretary of the Memorial Committee (Mr. H. P. Loasby) read the names on the memorial. After the "Last Post" had been sounded, there was a silence of a minute's duration. The hymn "O God our help in ages past" was sung with intensity of feeling.

The Vicar then solemnly dedicated the Cross.

The hymn "Lord, may Thy Soldiers, Faithful, True and Bold" was sung unaccompanied. The Blessing was followed by the Reveille.

On behalf of the churchwardens, Mr. A. H. Niblett acknowledged the custody of the memorial. He said they desired to express their gratitude and great pleasure in having the memorial handed over to their keeping. They would keep it in a state of preservation and neatness, so that it would be a shining light to the generations to come. He also desired to thank Sir John Keir for his presence that afternoon.

Many beautiful and costly wreaths were placed on the foot of the Cross by relatives and friends. The impressive ceremony was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

The Sunday School.

The Annual "Red Letter" Day for our children was fixed for July 26th. It was looked forward to by all with more excitement than usual, as the news leaked out that we were to visit Warwick in motor char-a-bancs. A start was made shortly after 2 o'clock, and after one of the best rides we have ever had we eventually reached our destination. The children soon scattered over the park and especially down to the water's edge, where quite a number dispensed with shoes and stockings, and paddled to their hearts' content. Soon the teachers had tea ready, and then the usual "tuck in" commenced which is one of the chief delights of a children's party. After tea, sports and games were indulged in, but one must not forget to mention the raid on the sweet stall. Talk about the queues in wartime—but no!—this was not to be compared with them, for this was a jolly happy queue. The return journey was commenced about 7-30 p.m., the children singing practically all the way. Thanks are due to all helpers.
